Jackie has worked in marketing, sales and training for over 25 years, having commenced work in her family’s civil engineering company. The majority of Jackie’s years have been spent in the training sector with national companies and running small enterprises.

She now runs her own People and Business Performance development consultancy where she provides Training, Coaching, NLP and Psychometric Assessments to support and develop individuals and organizations and ensure their recruitment places the right people in the right roles. She has provided training and coaching to people within the construction industry since the company was established.

In April 2007 Jackie became Sponsorship Secretary of the Black Country Constructing Excellence Club and also supports the organisation of each event.

She was the facilitator for the Construction Knowledge Exchange’s innovation circle working on attracting more Women Into Construction and presented this topic to the January 2008 Club event – which eventually led to the formation of Women Working in Construction. Jackie has also delivered ‘soft skills’ training to women in construction for the Centre for Construction Innovation. In June 2010 Jackie along with a group of associate women in the construction sector formed the Women Working in Construction group of which Jackie is currently Chair.

In November 2010 Jackie presented the Constructing Excellence National Award for Leadership and Development sponsored by Success Train Ltd.

She has recently commenced a role as visiting lecturer at University of Wolverhampton.

Jackie has been a finalist in the Networking of Aspiring Women’s award for Construction Woman and the Achiever’s Academy for Women Member of the Year award.
